Employers Overload: Providing Workforce Solutions for Major Companies for More Than 60 Years

Portland, OR – For more than 60 years, Employers Overload (EO) has been at the forefront of solving the most challenging staffing and workforce situations. Led by CEO Tom Szambelan, the company has focused efforts toward helping companies survive the economic downturn, providing highly skilled and qualified people, and solving unique workforce challenges so companies can stay profitable and viable. Visit Employers Overload at www.eostaffing.com.

Employers Overload provides workforce solutions by examining workplace situations and the unique requirements of modern companies and applying their experience to meet client requirements. Their highly trained staff has decades of knowledge in all areas of workforce management, including recruitment, candidate screening/selection, on-boarding processes, safety and risk management, employment practices, payroll processing, and on-site supervision and training. One of Employers Overload's main strengths is loyal executives who have been with the company for more than 20 years.

Employers Overload makes every effort to understand a client's business goals, staffing needs, and industry. EO works diligently to protect a client's reputation, employee welfare, and mutual business interests. EO also works to carefully assess a client's worksite through the examination of:

- recruiting and employment needs
- safety and risk management requirements
- training and management practices
- insurance requirements and exposure

"Helping People Succeed™ is more than just Employers Overload's motto, it's a mission," said John Vanderkin, president of Employers Overload.

Employers Overload is a leader in the staffing and workforce industry through the consistent demonstration of respect and integrity. Employers Overload's reputation is based upon honesty, consistency, and accuracy in the treatment of the two groups of people they serve - workforce employees and clients.
